

The Vikings

Homes

Viking homes called longhouses. They were simple log houses. Houses were usually one big, long, rectangular room with a central open fire, and a hole in the roof to let out the smoke.

Fur rugs covered the floor, the benches, and sometimes the walls. Windows were in roofs and covered with thin animal skin.

Domestic animals lived inside the house at night.

Video 1: Watch in class. Look at the inside part of the house.

Video 2: Now watch how to draw the outside part of the house. But first fold the paper in half longwise. When you finish drawing the outside, draw the inside.
